ST. PAUL'S BAY

This Tower, was the first of a number of coastal defence towers built around Malta, it was designed by the Maltese architect Vittorio Cassar and built in 1610 by Grand Master Alof de Wignacourt and is the oldest surviving coastal defence post in Malta. From 1610-49, Wignacourt Tower was Malta's northernmost defensive outpost until St Agatha's Tower (the Red Tower) was built in Mellieħa. In 1715 a coastal battery was added to increase its firepower.

The easy accessibility from the main promenade of St Paul's Bay lends itself as a practical choice of venue for small/medium events, which may extend to the public terrace surrounding the tower.
